

A STRONG
UNION FOR A STRONG
PUBLIC SYSTEM

Together,
let's block
the Dubé reform

COMPARISON WITH ALBERTA

- Bill 15 is inspired by a similar project carried out in Alberta in 2009, which means it's getting off to a bad start.
- The Alberta system is more expensive and has a higher hospital mortality ratio.
- If we want to carry out a wide-ranging reform of our health and social service system, we need to look elsewhere for inspiration.

A DEMOCRATIC DEFICIT

- Bill 15 wants to merge all local bargaining units, directly threatening each person's right to choose the union that will represent them.
- By weakening democratic power in the health and social service system, Bill 15 is getting off to a bad start.
- Our voices must be heard. The APTS wants employees to be present at every level where decisions are made in the health and social service system.

LABOUR RELATIONS

- The government says it wants to eliminate local collective agreements – which means it's denying and ignoring regional differences.
- By changing the bargaining model for collective agreements without prior consultation, Bill 15 is getting off to a bad start.
- Another reform of the governance of our health and social service system means we're putting off ensuring the use of best practices in occupational health and safety.

CENTRALIZATION

- The Dubé reform is largely based on an idea once put forward by Gaétan Barrette: concentrating power in fewer hands.
- Creating a gigantic new structure such as Santé Québec will make local management more difficult by adding an extra level of bureaucracy.
- Bill 15 is getting off to a bad start by making the health and social service system even more centralized.

PRIVATIZATION

- The private sector is hungry for financial resources that will enable it to perform acts similar to those carried out in the public system.
- Bill 15 is getting off to a bad start by acting as a Trojan horse for the private sector.
- The APTS says that all health care and social services should be nationalized so that all Quebecers are guaranteed access.

To help maintain our public services,
share the information
in this document with your region's elected officials.

CONTACT DETAILS

Name: _____

Tel. number: _____

info@aptsq.com